

- * "Jesus told us to go unto the uttermost parts of the earth...", including fb, twitter, google, plaxco, linkedin...
- * The newest mission field is at your fingertips -- no passport needed!
- * Social Networking has redefined words like "community" and "friends"
- * Peel away the layers, look beyond the graphic interfaces and apps and what do you find at the core? The universal human need for relationships. We thrive and survive in relationships.
- * Tipping Point Pentecost was a Tipping Point!
(Tipping Point=the level at which the momentum for change becomes unstoppable.)
- * 1 of every 8 couples married in 2008 met via social networking
- * Communicate the Gospel in the most relevant channels available -- here, there, everywhere -- even if "everywhere" includes foreign lands with peculiar names like fb, twitter, linkedin, etc.
- * The dramatic shift in communication and the hunger for online connection has spawned a new mission field unlike any the church has ever seen!
- * "Connected" people can easily become more spiritually "disconnected".
- * There's no turning back -- like the intro of TV, microwaves, PCs, etc., for the Boomers, our children have/are growing up as digital natives. The future will not resemble the past. We must develop strategies that fit our mission field reality.
- * Today I can surf for holiday recipes or diagnose my aches and pains w/the skill of a second year med student.
- * No one owns the Internet... yet. It has linked us all closer than anyone could have imagined.
- * Paul was appropriate, respectful and adapted to the culture in which he lived, but he did not alter the message of Christ. 1Cor. 9:22-23
- * Like all mission fields, this one is ripe for the harvest but also ripe with land mines.
